Woods Hole Yacht Club

History

The Woods Hole Yacht Club was formed in 1896 and incorporated in 1897. A group of its members erected a pier for it on land donated by Horace S. Crowell, an early incorporator of the club and part owner of the Bar Neck Company. The land Crowell donated was part of the Bar Neck property. It was located directly across the street from the candle factory, a stone building owned today by the Marine Biological Laboratory. A club house, completed in 1899, was constructed on the end of the pier. Today the same club house serves as the M. B. L. Club, having been moved back from the pier to its present location on land.

The incorporators of the early club consisted of both summer residents from Penzance Point and permanent residents from the Woods Hole community. Mr. Henry K. Dyer was the original Commodore and Mr. Walter Luscombe was the original Treasurer. The financial arrangements for the operation of the club called for a Board of Trustees which would act as shareholders and own the assets of the club. Members would pay annual dues that would be held by the shareholders.

The club functioned uninterrupted until 1910. Its racing classes were dominated by catboats and spritsails. Boats in each of these classes varied greatly in design. Handicapping was difficult and creating a second division in each class was only a temporary solution to the problems which resulted. Other problems arose among the membership concerning the dues structure. Rising costs made it necessary for the club to raise its dues. A sharp division of opinion on how this should be done led to the withdrawal from the club of nearly all its summer residents. Social and racing events were poorly attended in the summer of 1910. In 1911 the membership voted to decommission the yacht club until activities might be continued in a friendlier fashion. Charles Crane of Juniper Point then purchased the outstanding shares from the trustees. Mr. Crane paid all invoices which were due and assumed ownership of the property. In 1912 he gave the property and the clubhouse to the M. B. L.

For a few years, the club continued to function informally as a small social center for the members who were permanent residents in an upstairs room of the firehouse. When many members were called to serve in World War I, the club's membership was severely depleted. As a result, the club ceased its existence in 1919 in any active form.

In 1929, a group of young summer residents, who had been racing Cape Cod dories with the encouragement of Mrs. W. Murray Crane decided they would like to take their racing more seriously. They had been referring to themselves casually as the Woods Hole Yacht Club, but when they looked into adopting the name formally it was found that the charter of the early club was still in existence. In June 1930, a delegation of the young people called on Mr. Franklin Gifford, who had been elected principal Trustee until a successor should be elected when the club again became active. They told him of their desire to revive the yacht club in Woods Hole and asked for his help in enabling them to use the name of the Woods Hole Yacht Club. Mr. Gifford arranged a meeting with as many old members and Trustees as he could contact in order to introduce the two groups. At this July 12, 1930 meeting, Mrs. Crane and the group who had been racing dories were elevated to membership. At the meeting, Mr. Gifford resigned and Mrs. Crane was elected as Commodore. In this way, the charter passed from the original group to the younger generation.

During the next few weeks, many of the adult yacht owners in Woods Hole joined the club and an annual meeting was held early in August. At this meeting, a full slate of officers was elected. Mrs. Crane was to continue as Commodore in the ensuing year. Mr. Frank J. Frost, vice-commodore, extended to the club the use of his boathouse on Penzance Point until the club would have a headquarters of its own.

Edward Norman joined the club in 1930 and was elected its Treasurer. His strong beliefs influenced the development of the yacht club. Mr. Norman believed in a small club without dining rooms and bars. He insisted on upon full membership participation as well as having the Club join district and national governing organizations. He refused to allow handicap racing since he believed no rule was fair. He felt that more than four racing classes of one-design boats would harm the growth of the racing fleet.

During this first year of formal activity the club held a series of races for two classes, one a combination of Cape Cod dories and mixed small Knockabouts, and one of mixed catboats. At the end of the summer the club had seventy-three members and some fifty craft enrolled. By 1932, the club had four small boat classes: the Cape Cod Knockabout, the Buzzards Bay Knockabout, Cape Cod dories and catboats. Races were also instituted for larger boats of the S and Wianno types.

The growth of the yacht club was becoming an imposition on the Crane and Frost families who had been allowing the yacht club the use of their facilities. In the fall of 1932, negotiations for land on Great Harbor begun with the Bureau of Fisheries in 1930 were resumed. It was discovered, however, that the Bureau had no legal right to lease the federal land to anyone. In 1933, Congressman Charles L. Gifford of Cotuit agreed to place a bill before Congress allowing the Woods Hole Yacht Club to lease the land on Great Harbor from the federal government. The bill passed both houses of Congress and was signed by President Roosevelt in June 1934. Also during the summer of 1934, heirs and descendents of Joseph Story Fay, who had given the land to the United States government in 1883, signed a waiver of their contingent interest in this land in case it should not be used for government purposes. The way was now clear for the yacht club. In the winter of 1935, a 25 year lease was arranged with the Bureau of Fisheries.

By the end of July 1935, the Woods Hole Yacht Club had the use of its own facilities. A stone pier had been constructed and a small house erected near the pier to serve as headquarters and storage place for gear. The club was able to conduct races for Wianno, Cape Cod, and Buzzards Bay Knockabouts from its own facilities. Members, influenced by Mr. Norman, decided not to permit handicap racing to become established at the club. It was felt that the classes which it had offered a sufficiently wide variety to satisfy all degrees of skill, desire, and expense.

The Woods Hole Yacht Club was only moderately damaged by the Hurricane of 1938. The storm came late in the month of September. Unlike now, when many boats stay in the water into the fall, most of the boats had been hauled and put away for the winter around Labor Day. The total financial damage done to the yacht club totaled $6,000.

During the war years from 1941 – 1946 the yacht club activities were restricted to harbor racing and sailing. All boats were required to have identification cards which included the owner's fingerprints and photograph. The majority of the membership were serving in the war. Dr. Eliot Clark and Robert P. Bigelow maintained the club during those years and held races for those who were able to participate.

In 1954 Hurricane Carol brought devastating damage to the yacht club. Most of the repairs could not be funded through usual borrowing methods because of lease restrictions. There was an atmosphere of defeat about the club until Commodore elect Robert Bigelow took over his duties. He announced there were no plans to abandon the yacht club and return the land to the fisheries. At the annual meeting a revitalization plan gained the support of the membership. The most serious problems were financing the reconstruction of the clubhouse, dock and floats as well as finding boats to rebuild the fleets. The Knockabouts in particular had suffered severe damage.

During the winter months of 1955 significant progress was made. A financial campaign produced the necessary revenues to cover construction. The Knockabout class was brought back to its original strength by new purchase or professional repairs to badly damaged boats. In June of 1955, the yacht club was commissioned with a completely rebuilt clubhouse and all floats and docks in place.

With the probability of future storms and the large amount of capital just expended to rebuild the damaged property, Commodore Bigelow decided to once again explore the possibility of land purchase from the U. S. Government. With the approval of the membership, Vice Commodore Walter Garrey was given the responsibility to proceed with Congressman Donald Nickerson in preparing a Bill for Congressional action. Accepting the risks that the property would have to be auctioned to the highest bidder and that the Government would retain all rights to the property in times of national crisis, the yacht club decided to file the bill. Having no other bidders, in 1962 the Government informed the yacht club that the land would be sold to them at fair market value. President John Kennedy signed the bill to complete the transaction.

Yacht club membership grew rapidly during the 1950s and 1960s. Interest in boating surged during the fifties, principally due to the introduction of inexpensive, low-maintenance fiberglass boats. By 1962, fiberglass Knockabouts demonstrated their ability to race even with wooden Knockabouts. Many of these fiberglass Knockabouts were purchased by members of the Woods Hole scientific community who then joined the yacht club. Many from the group became active participants in yacht club administration and racing. For many years the racing fleet of Knockabouts averaged about twenty-five boats for the Sunday series of races.

It was during the 1960s that the children's sailing program began. It was introduced by Dr. John Buck whose daily supervision included direct participation and teaching. Then as now, the program emphasized both basic seamanship and racing. Today the yacht club hires an instructor and an assistant instructor to conduct the program.

During his term (1964 – 1966) as Commodore, James Mavor introduced a small boat called a Mirror to the club. Its design favored the sailing conditions of the area and was an outstanding boat for racing. Woods Hole had been waiting for a small boat class that could be a children's boat as well as one suitable for adult dinghy racing. The Mirror class was a success with club members and in a few years as many as twenty-five boats were sailing in Great Harbor. Lasers, Thistles, and Javelins have also enjoyed periods of with the club membership.

John Leiby became Commodore (1966-1969) at a time when the yacht club was facing many problems caused by its increased membership. His recommendations for an enlarged parking area, a newly constructed cruising boat dock, relocation of floats and docks, and the building of a marine railway for larger boats were accepted by the membership. Although there was some expression of concern by the membership about the size and cost of the undertaking, the effort successfully solved the problem of increasing congestion.

The 1990s saw several new trends in boating reflected in its membership. Cruising over racing became the preference of many of the club's successful skippers. About seventy cruising boats registered at the yacht club during this time. Also during this decade, the club took in members from the house boat community that had grown in Great Harbor.

The Yacht Club has continued since the 1960s in a favorable stable condition without the need for further land transactions, hurricane repair, or building construction. The commodores, led by their Board of Governors, who are advised by a membership of over six hundred, have become managers of policy as well as racing and social events. They have been helped by the hundreds of committee members and officers drawn from the approximately two thousand members who have been a part of the club over the years.

Woods Hole Yacht Club

Scope

The Woods Hole Yacht Club collection contains items and documents from three distinct periods in the club's history. Among documents from the early yacht club period, 1896-1912, are a bound journal dated July 1896 containing a report of the initial proceedings to organize the club and an 1899 Membership Booklet. The informal years of the club, 1912-1930, are represented by an account ledger from May 1912 to June 1921. The final period in the collection extends from August 1930, when the club was formally reorganized with an elected slate of officers and a board of governors, to the present. The majority of the collection extends from 1930 to 1996. Papers from this period include correspondence, newspaper clippings, race results, meeting minutes, treasurer's reports, budgets, committee reports, W.H.Y.C. calendars, member notices, and membership booklets. Of particular interest is a booklet, "Starboard", published by the club for its Centennial in 1996. It is a collection of club racing accounts written by John Buck for the Falmouth Enterprise during the decade of 1971-1981.
